- Six degrees of separation is the idea that all living things and everything else in the world are six or fewer steps away from each other so that a chain of "a friend of a friend" statements can be made to connect any two people in a maximum of six steps. It was originally set out by Frigyes Karinthy in 1929 and popularized in an eponymous 1990 play written by John Guare.
- Why hate on your closest neighbors
- there is no one else out there to be a human too.
- We are humanity
- Every single human that you have ever seen, heard of, knew, loved or shook hands with, have all been right here.
- human being - a member of any of the races of Homo sapiens; person; man, woman, or child
- There are 6,000 generations between you, me, everyone alive, and our common human ancestor.
- That makes us all cousins 6000 generations removed.
- many of your great great great great great great grandparents are the same people
- The DNA of all human beings living today is 99.9% alike.
- Everyone today is descended from a population of H. sapiens that was about 10,000 individuals. Are we "technically" relatives? Depends on how loose you would like to get with the term "relatives".
